

INTRODUCTION FOR STEVE SPANGLER

He's a bestselling author, STEM educator, and television host who has spent thirty years turning science into something nobody wants to miss.

He's the guy behind YouTube's first viral science video — the one that taught the world what happens when you drop Mentos into a bottle of Diet Coke. His videos have since generated more than 4.5 billion views across social media. That's billion. With a "b."

His books and experiments have become go-to resources for parents and educators worldwide — the kind of stuff that makes kids actually want to know what happens next.

If you've seen the enormous mess he repeatedly made on The Ellen DeGeneres Show, you already know why Ellen calls Steve the science teacher you always wanted — because the fire department shows up twice a year.

Ladies and gentlemen, please welcome Steve Spangler.